

Meet our therapists

Stacey Gallagher DPT

Physical Therapist

stacey@allianceptme.com

Born and raised in Massachusetts, Stacey completed her bachelor's degree at UMass Amherst in 2018, and went on to earn her doctorate in physical therapy from Simmons University in 2021. While earning her doctorate, she gained invaluable experiences working in a variety of settings, including multiple outpatient clinics, a public school system, and an acute care hospital.

Stacey's passion to become a physical therapist began in high school when she sustained a knee injury playing soccer. Throughout her own course of physical therapy, she learned how meaningful the relationship between patient and therapist can be.

In addition to building relationships, Stacey's favorite things about physical therapy include designing individualized treatment plans and empowering patients to be in control of their health. She moved to Maine full-time in 2021 and is excited to further Alliance PT's mission of providing high-quality and evidence-based care for the greater Portland community.

When she is not in clinic, you can find her on the slopes of Sunday River, exploring the restaurant scene of the Old Port, and cheering on Boston sports teams.

“...Stacey's favorite things about physical therapy include designing individualized treatment plans and empowering patients to be in control of their health.”
