

Meet our therapists

Bryan earned his doctorate in physical therapy from Tufts University in 2022, after studying kinesiology and French at Utah State University.

Bryan was drawn to physical therapy by the unique opportunity to promote physical activity while enhancing the quality of life for others. He has a particular interest in working with people suffering from chronic pain, and members of the community who face language barriers to receiving high quality healthcare.

He grew up in South Portland and has relocated frequently since first leaving Maine in 2018, including time in France where he met his wife. They returned to Maine in 2022 and are enjoying life with their two small children, finding time through the chaos to bask in the beauty of the Maine outdoors.
